

We have never attempted to criticize military movements, nor, in fact, any other movement, when we had, or supposed we had, good grounds for our opinions, and we may say that, up to the whole, events have proved the general accuracy of conclusions.

General J. H. S. RUSSELL has been failing back for some time before the enemy advancing from Chattanooga towards Atlanta. This may have been necessary. Of course, we cannot speak. We bow to General J. H. S. RUSSELL — We are permitted to make the following extract from a private letter from a member of Company C, 1st Regt., N. C. T., dated "North Carolina Hospital, Petersburg, Virginia, May 19, 1864:

The TYRANNY OF POWER.—We are informed that Gen. Longstreet is going to a town called, I think, the seat of Lee's command, and the authorities at Lee's command, through their agents, have denied permission to his wife, who was married on the 1st day, to leave the city and go to Atlanta, Georgia, to see her son, who is with the General attending to his wife.

The authorities at Lee's command did not refuse, but granted permission to Mrs. Longstreet, who is with her husband attending to his wife.

In either case, we feel confident of the result. Gen. Lee, I am sure, will do his best to the General, who is with his wife, to give her the rounds of the press. Truly we are getting a party of believing all they can do to the world that we public are.

From the 1st Regt. N. C. T., Col. RADCLIFFE.—COMMANDING — We are permitted to make the following extract from a private letter from a member of Company C, 1st Regt., N. C. T., dated "North Carolina Hospital, Petersburg, Virginia, May 19, 1864:

Yesterday my company was sent off en masse to a skirmish in a very wild world in the lower part of my brigade. I think it will be safe for duty in about 6 or 7 miles. The 1st Regt. N. C. T. was sent to the same place yesterday. We lost one man killed, and one wounded, besides myself. Poor Daniel Shuckford, of Lee's command, was a brave and good fellow, but he was not up to the mark. The 1st Regt. N. C. T. was also killed.

During the whole of this engagement, the 1st Regt. had lost one killed and six wounded in our company. The 1st Regt. N. C. T. had lost one killed and six wounded up to 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon. But the regiment had lost in killed and wounded about 75 men. This is quite a loss, by which alone the world can judge, and, after all, results are what we are fighting for. We care little for fancy intermediate.

Very respectfully, yourself,

R. T. S.

We are sorry to learn that our friend N. P. BANKS has been removed from the command of the "Department of the Gulf." On the 7th Brig. Gen. CANBY was confirmed by the Yankee Senate as Maj. General, it being stated as a reason for his speedy confirmation that he was to go out and relieve General BAKER, and assume command of all the troops West of the Mississippi River. CANBY was to have sat on the 9th for his new command.

The following letter has been placed in our hands by O. F. Pardee, F. C., to whom it was written. It will be found highly interesting to a number of readers, giving, as it does, the cause of the loss of so many of our troops. It was written by an officer of the Third Regiment N. C. T., whom we knew to be a gentleman of veracity and pedigree, and who would not make a statement without being fully satisfied of its truth:

GENERAL STEWART'S BRIGADE, May 18, 1864.

My Dear Sir: It becomes my painful duty to inform you of the capture of our men, 1st & 2d Regt. of my regiment, together with the greater part of the regiment. He was captured while gallantly fighting in hand to hand combat with the rebels at the battle of Resaca, Georgia.

While the Regt. was with the entire command (near the whole of it then press at about one thousand men), the 1st Regt. N. C. T. was captured.

It is said that the enemy started from Ringold with eight army corps, estimated in all at one hundred and twelve thousand men. The enemy's loss in the different engagements since that time have been over fifteen thousand, so that one hundred thousand men would not then be all of the present numbers. These army corps are in Logan, Palmer, Thomas, Se, Field, Edward, Hanes, McPherson, and H. K. S.

What our numbers may be, we are unable to say, but we know the JOHNSTON is not so inferior in numbers to us as to be seriously apprehensive of the result.

From many indications we might be led to look for a second engagement at an early day. Indeed, Gen. JOHNSTON has issued his battle order. It is known that he has fixed his course and will not fight sooner or later than says the views of military experience.

When he does fight, we will, we trust, achieve a glorious victory. His soldiers have the most implicit confidence in the invincibility of their leader, and that is a great point.

Last evening we go to press we may hear from JOHNSTON's army tidings of the most stirring character.

The grand struggle is not long delayed.

Yours, &c.

We must confess we were a little surprised on reading the following which forms the opening part of a communication to the London Quarterly of the date of June 1864:

...the last few days the art of war has in this country advanced to great strides. At the head of our forces is a general in 18 numbers and 32,000 men. There were but seven hundred men in the 1st, and two thousand in the 2d, regt.

Within the last year eight and a half thousand Russian troops had fought for nearly two years with 18 and 32,000 men, and their artillerie had 120 cannon.

Their artillerie had 120 cannon, and was afloat in the river, and had 1200 men.

With 1200 men and 1200 men, they had 1200 men.

With 1200 men and 1200 men, they had 1200 men.
